BBC School Report written by Megan Jope

On Thursday 10th March, we participated in the BBC School Report. We asked shoppers in Truro about the impact of having a Primark in the area. We had mixed feelings about the development “It will be a good thing have a Primark in the town, as it will encourage more people to come into Truro.” said Victoria from the BBC report team. She also said that “There would not be an effect on the community.”

We also talked to one of the managers of Marks and Spencer. They said, “There would probably be little or no effect for them, with Primark moving to the town as there are certain people who shop for designer clothing, and people who would shop for less expensive clothing.”

Overall, the morning was really interesting. I enjoyed speaking to members of the public and asking them for their views.
